Sir Arthur Conan Doyle
(21-10-05)

Conan Doyle      And I have a little message to give to Mrs Keen.

Veronica            Thank you.

Conan Doyle      I must tell you that . . . indeed, I'm personally doing a great deal of work with your husband and it is an enjoyable time to become more aware of the more modern attitudes to spiritualism and mediumship. But er . . . I have to say, my dear, that it saddens me to see so many ways of the past forgotten, and really, many of the things that the modern scientists are looking at; well, people from my time looked at that before. Why is there a need to constantly repeat, the same exercises, the same experiments, over and over again?

It is, I suppose, because of the rather arrogant and selfish nature that seems to be attributed to mankind so very often, that they cannot believe what another has shown them very clearly. They have to have personal experience now. Whereas I am, well, yes, I understand that very much with regard to the philosophy of life but not to the phenomena. And the more difficult the scientists and investigators make it for those mediums who can demonstrate forms of mediumship that is tangible and measureable, the more difficult they make it, the less and less they will find what they are looking for. It is something that they must be made aware of. Yes.

And perhaps you can be instrumental in bringing some of that awareness to them as your own pathway opens more and more.

Veronica            Yes. Thank you.

Conan Doyle      Be reassured that your husband is working very hard at your side, always, and indeed, is steering you in the right direction. You know this.

Veronica            Yes.

Conan Doyle      Do not dispute what you see. Be happy with what presents itself. You were told that things would unfold from the summer and surely, by now, you've seen that.

Veronica            Yes. I have.

Conan Doyle      There. Well, it was interesting to see you, once more, and I must step away.

There. Good evening, my friends. God bless you.

Sitters              God bless you.
